INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this cookbook is to provide a resource for the scouters and scouts of Troop 28, Colleyville, Texas. Cooking can be one of the most enjoyable skills learned in scouting. Everyone loves good food, and learning how to prepare tasty meals will only enhance your outdoor experiences. I hope this resource provides the basic information needed to help you improve your cooking skills and to give you some recipe ideas for your outings.

Success with your cooking requires good planning. A detailed food list should be carefully prepared prior to your trip to the grocery store. Attention to detail in generating your food list is critical. You won't have a chance to buy a missing ingredient when you are many miles from the nearest supermarket. Checking your list, item by item, as you place them in your shopping basket will insure that you buy exactly what's on your list. Compare prices on different brands of the same item and you will be surprised about how much money you can save!

Read and reread the recipe you are following before you begin to prepare a dish. Make sure you have the ingredients close at hand and that you have the various utensils you will need nearby (i.e. measuring spoons, spatulas, spoons, etc). Consider the type of heat source you will be using, and prepare the cooking fire before preparing the dish. Whether you are using a cooking fire, charcoal briquettes, or another heat source, you will need to determine how long it will take to have your heat source ready for cooking.

Lastly, remember to use safe food-handling practices: 1) Keep perishable food in ice chests at cold temperatures, 2) Wash your hands with soap and water prior to touching or preparing a meal, 3) Keep your food away from contaminants or poisons, such as bug baits or lantern fuel, and 4) Keep your utensils clean by using the 3-step cleaning method we use in our Troop 28. Food poisoning or other problems await those who do not pay attention to cleanliness when food is being prepared.

This booklet is divided into three main sections: 1) cooking without benefit of traditional utensils or containers, 2) backpacking or trail meals, and 3) Dutch oven cooking and one pot meals. Different equipment needs or requirements will be addressed in each section as appropriate. Some information on cooking terms and definitions, and on other outdoor cooking references, is also attached as an appendix.

I hope this guide assists you in preparing good food, or as Mr. Holcomb says, "Iarapin' vittles"!

SECTION ONE

Cooking with Aluminum Foil

Many foods can be cooked without using traditional cooking utensils such as pots, pans, or Dutch ovens. Novelty cooking methods include cooking directly on coals or rocks, cooking food inside of food, cooking using green sticks, and cooking using only aluminum foil.

Possibilities include the use of an orange as your “pot”. Slice an orange in half so that the stem end is not in the middle of your cooking vessel. Remove the orange sections and eat them immediately! Place a ball of ground meat in the middle of the shell to which you have added a bit of onion, perhaps some green pepper, and some salt and pepper. Place the filled orange shell directly on the coals, and cook for 15-20 minutes.

If you were eating breakfast, you could use the orange peel as an egg-cooking device. Crack one egg into each half of the orange shell, and place each shell directly on the coals. The eggs should be ready to eat in approximately 10-12 minutes.

A whole onion could be used to cook the above two foods instead of the orange. Cut the onion in half, and remove enough of the onion’s middle so that you have a shell which is about 3/8” to 1/2” thick. Place the foods in the half and cook just as before. The time required to cook your mini-meatloaf or eggs should be about the same as with using the orange peels.

How about some corn on the cob cooked right on the coals? Peel the corn shucks (the green outer layer) about halfway down the ear of corn. Remove the silk, which is the stringy threadlike stuff right next to the corn kernels. Moisten the corn with a little bit of water and replace the shucks. Place the ear of corn on some coals and cook for 5 minutes. Rotate the ear of corn one half of a turn and cook for 5 additional minutes. A little bit of butter or margarine, and a touch of salt, and you are ready to go!

Cooking with nothing but a paper bag? Sure, and here is how! Get a lunch sack sized paper bag and a pointed stick. Place a strip of bacon or two in the bottom of the paper bag. Break an egg in the bag over the bacon strips. Begin rolling the bag from the top down with 1” folds until halfway down. Push the pointed stick through the rolled end of the bag and hold the bag over the coals. Grease from the bacon will coat the bottom of the bag. The egg should be done in about 10-12 minutes. Keep the bag from getting too close to the fire as the grease is quite flammable. When ready, you can eat right out of the sack!

If you want to try an easy dessert, try this one. Cut a wedge-shaped section out of the length of one banana. Place marshmallows and chocolate chips into the cavity of the banana. Wrap the banana in foil and heat over coals for 4-6 minutes. Unwrap and put some pineapple pieces, cherries, or chopped nuts over the banana and you have the trail version of a banana split.

In terms of supported or suspended cooking methods, why don’t you try one of these options. Make yourself a batch of biscuit dough just as instructed per the Bisquick box or similar product. Find a green tree limb maybe 1 to 1 1/2" in diameter. Clean the bark off of the limb, and carve a couple of grooves around the limb to make the surface somewhat rough. After mixing the dough, roll or pat the dough into a strip 12-18" in length, 2" wide, and about 1/4" to 3/8" thick. Moisten the stick (spit), and begin wrapping the dough in a diagonal pattern around the spit leaving a slight space between the wraps of dough. Press the dough gently as you wrap so that it will stick to the spit. Suspend the spit over a bed of coals and cook until golden brown. Keep rotating the spit as you cook so that the bread will cook evenly.

If you like shish-kabobs, you can use a sharpened stick as your skewer. Find a green stick, perhaps 18" to 24" in length and remove the bark. Use a hardwood like oak, hickory, or ash if available as it will likely not leave an aftertaste with the food. Wood from cedar, pine, or other evergreens may leave an undesirable aftertaste due to the high levels of resins and pitch in these particular woods. Cut pieces of beef from skirt steak, or other such cuts, into 1" square chunks. Cut an onion into quarters and a green pepper into wedges. If you want a little different flavor, also gather about 16 good sized chunks of pineapple. Begin threading these different items onto the green stick in an alternating pattern, such as beef, pepper, onion, pineapple, etc. Repeat this pattern until you and/or your other members use up your ingredients. Cook over hot coals, and rotate the stick regularly so that the food cooks evenly. The kabob should be ready in 15-20 minutes if you regulate the heat appropriately.

If you have a sweet tooth, try this recipe. Select a good cooking apple such as a Jonathan or a Rome. Use a sharpened stick by pushing the stick into the apple until secure. Place the apple 2-3 inches over the coals, and roast the apple until the apple skin is easily removed. Remove the skin (be careful, it's hot!), and then roll the apple in a small bowl filled with a mixture of sugar and cinnamon. Begin roasting the apple again until the sugar melts and forms a glaze or coating over the apple. Remove the apple from the stick and eat your "apple pie on a stick"!

One other interesting cooking method is to use a dingle stick. To prepare dingle stick chicken, try the following: Clean and salt and pepper a whole chicken. Tie the wings and legs to the body so that they don't flop around. Push sharpened stakes through the chicken just under the wings and near where the thighs join the body. The ends of these stakes should stick out about 3-4 inches from each side of the chicken. Drive your dingle stick (sharpened stake 24-30 inches long) into the ground so that the end is over the fire. Hang the chicken from a thong (leather, wire, heavy cord) which is attached to the dingle stick. Place a foil pan under the chicken to catch the drippings, and suspend the bird over the coals. Cook 15-20 minutes, and then swap the thong around so that the other half of the bird is suspended over the coals. Cook another 15 minutes and you should be ready to eat! To keep the chicken from drying out, try rubbing a bit of melted butter or margarine on the chicken as it cooks. You might also try using other seasonings on the chicken, such as seasoning salt, paprika, garlic salt, or allspice.

ALUMINUM FOIL COOKING

Many dishes can be prepared using no other tool or utensil except for aluminum foil. Aluminum foil is an essential part of any patrol's chuck box. It is best to use heavy duty foil as it can take more abuse before ripping or tearing. When cooking with foil, make sure that the seams and folds you make are as airtight as possible so as to retain heat. This allows the food inside to cook faster in the same way a pressure cooker operates. Some basic recipes using foil are:

Foil Dinner

1/3 pound of hamburger meat shaped into patty
1 teaspoon (tsp) of dry gravy mix
Several slices of raw potato
Several slices of raw onion
Several slices of raw carrot
Seasoning salt to taste

Place the patty on a piece of aluminum foil sized at about 18"x18". Place the other ingredients on top of and around the patty. Wrap the mixture up making sure to seal the top and the sides with at least 3 one inch folds. Place the foil package (being careful not to puncture the foil) on a bed of coals and cook for approximately 15 minutes per side. Open carefully so as not to get burned and eat right out of the foil!

Stuffed Green Peppers

1/2 pound of hamburger
Salt and pepper
One egg
1/3 of cup of diced onion
4 green peppers

Scrape out the green peppers and wash thoroughly. Mix together the other ingredients and add salt and pepper (to taste). Stuff the mixture into the peppers and wrap each pepper in foil -- again remembering to make good seals on the seams of the foil, where you have folded. Place the peppers on a bed of hot coals, and cook on each side for 12-15 minutes. Serves 2.

Fried Chicken

8 chicken drumsticks
1/4 pound of butter or margarine
Salt and pepper

Cut eight pieces of heavy duty foil into 12"x18" pieces. Place a thoroughly washed drumstick onto the middle of each piece of foil with a pat of butter underneath the chicken. Sprinkle the drumstick with salt and pepper. Seal the chicken in the foil using 3 tight folds. Cook on hot coals turning the chicken every 5 minutes. Again, be careful not to rip or tear the foil package! The chicken should be done in about 25-30 minutes depending on the temperature of the coal bed. Feeds 4.

Meat Casserole

2 cans of tomato soup
2 and 2/3 cups of pre-cooked rice
2 pounds of hot dogs
2 cans of peas (17 oz. cans)

Cut eight 12"x18" pieces of heavy duty aluminum foil. Make each piece of foil into a bowl shaped container (like a cereal bowl). Don't tear or break the foil! Pour 1/4 cup of tomato soup into each bowl and then add 1/3 cup of the rice. Take two hot dogs and slice them into 1/2 inch thick slices and place them atop the rice and tomato mixture. Add 1/4 can of peas to the mixture (no juice!) and then carefully seal the foil. Place on the coals and cook for ten minutes. Check and see if the rice is soft. If so, you are ready to eat. If not, place back on the coals after resealing for 5 more minutes. If you want a different twist, top the dish when finished with a small amount of grated cheddar cheese. Feeds 4-8.

Cubed Steak Dinner

8 medium potatoes
4 medium onions
2 cans (17 oz) of green peas
Small container of Crisco shortening
2-3 lbs. of cubed steak (cut up into 8 servings)
Salt and pepper

You will need 8 pieces of foil with each piece being 12"x18". Peel the potatoes and remove the outer layer from the onions. Open the peas and drain the liquid. On each piece of foil, place 1/2 teaspoon of Crisco shortening. Place the steak on top of the shortening, and then place 1/4 cup of peas on top of the steak. Slice a potato and add to the top or sides of steak. Slice onion and add onion to mixture. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Seal each package and place on coals. Cook 30-40 minutes; turning the package every 5 minutes. Be careful with the package when turning so as not to break the seal. Open up carefully and enjoy! Serves 6-8.

Ham Dinner

2 cans of green peas (17 oz cans)
1 20 Oz. can of slice pineapple
8 slices of cooked ham (sliced at 1/4 " thick)
1 small jar of mustard
1 package of whole cloves

You will need 8 pieces of heavy duty foil cut into 12x18" pieces. Drain fluid from peas and pineapple, and discard. Spread each piece of foil out and to each add: a slice of ham in middle, spread a thin coat of mustard on the ham, add 3 cloves to the ham slice (stick 'em in it!), put a slice of pineapple on ham, add a 1/4 cup of peas to top, and seal the foil. Place on coal bed and cook for 15 minutes; turning every 5 minutes. Serves 6-8.

Barbequed Ribs in Foil

3 pounds of pork spareribs
1 cup of barbeque sauce
Salt and pepper

Grab yourself a large piece of heavy duty foil, doubled up for extra thickness. Put the ribs in a single layer(not stacked!) on the foil and season with salt and pepper. Seal the foil without sauce and place 4 inches above a hot bed of coals. Cook for 45 minutes, turning the package once about half of the way through. Remove the package, open carefully and spoon the sauce over the ribs. Leave the ribs in the foil but keep the foil package open and cook for 5 more minutes.(4" above the coals). Turn the ribs over, put on some more sauce and cook for 5 more minutes. Serves 4.

SECTION TWO

Backpacking Foods and Trail Meals

When considering what kinds of food to take on a hike or backpacking trip, the following qualities should be considered: nutritious, easy to fix, quick, lightweight, tasty, compact and sturdy, inexpensive, and nonperishable. You should also be prepared to eat more than the three meals we all traditionally eat. Supplement your three meals with snacks so that your body will get the necessary fuel it needs to keep up your energy level.

This section is divided into four categories: snacks, breakfast foods, lunches, and dinners. Desserts are included at the end of the dinner section. Keep in mind that much of the preparation required can be done prior to the trip. Most of the ingredients found in the following recipes can be found in your local supermarket. Should you wish to dehydrate your own food, a food dehydrator can be inexpensively purchased at a Wal-Mart, K-Mart or Target store.

TRAIL SNACKS OR MIXES

- 5 tbsp of vegetable shortening

Grease the insides of the two pie pans well with the shortening. Set the camp stove to a steady low flame and put one pan on the burner to melt the shortening. Combine the muffin mix, milk powder, and water and stir until just blended. Spoon the lumpy batter into the hot pie pan. Spread the batter evenly in the heated pan and then top with the second greased pan. Secure the edges of the two pans together with the clothes pins (soaked in water to prevent burning). Bake for 4 minutes on one side and then invert the pie oven and cook for 4 more minutes. Continue this pattern of cooking for 4 minutes and then alternating until bread is done. Cut into wedges and serve.

Rice Pudding

Potato Pancakes

2 cups of finely grated raw potatoes
1/4 cup of water
2 eggs, beaten
1/4 cup of Bisquick
1 1/4 tsps. of salt

Form ingredients into patties and drop into 1/4 cup hot oil. Turn the patties over after browning on one side. Brown on other side and serve warm.

The above-described recipes are a departure from oatmeal, bagels, english muffins, or flour tortillas, which could be eaten for breakfast. One could use Tang or similar powdered drinks to supplement your breakfast. Many breakfast breads such as zucchini bread, pumpkin bread, or cranberry bread could be made at home prior to the trip and then eaten along the trail for breakfast or as trail snacks.

Other dessert items could include prepackaged fig bars or Rice Krispie treats. As with other freeze-dried food items found in stores specializing in outdoor equipment, there are several dessert items available.

The purpose of this section is to show that there are other alternatives to macaroni and cheese or pre-packaged freeze-dried foods. Items such as dried vegetables mixed with pastas or rice can serve as a good basis for lunches and dinners. Canned meats or dry sausage like pepperoni or salami can also be used, along with cheese, to add additional protein. There are many pre-packaged sauces available, which can also be used to spice up a meal. Use your imagination with spices and you will be surprised as to what you will be able to do with your trail foods!

SECTION THREE

Dutch Oven Cooking

This section is dedicated to Dutch oven cooking and the many different types of food which can be prepared in a Dutch oven. In fact, almost any recipe can be prepared in a Dutch oven since it is so versatile. While the history of the Dutch oven is a bit sketchy, we do know that this particular utensil has been around a long time and has changed little. Some say that the oven was in use when Napoleon was alive, and we do know that the ovens were used by Lewis and Clark during their Northwest Expedition. Scouting has seen the use of Dutch ovens for many, many years, and because of their versatility, they will be used for many years to come.

Characteristics of a Dutch oven. A Dutch oven consists of three parts: a bail or handle, a lid and the pot itself. The bail swings from side to side and balances the weight of the oven when the oven is lifted or moved. The lid has a flange around the upper edge to keep ashes out of the food. The pot tapers out from the flat bottom and has three funnel-shaped legs, which hold the pot above the heat source and allows air to circulate. Ovens are made out of two materials, which are aluminum and cast iron. Both have their advantages and disadvantages, but most people prefer the cast iron oven despite its increased weight.

Ovens come in many different sizes and they are sized based upon the diameter of the oven at the top of the pot. The most common sizes range from 10" to 14". They also come in different pot depths so it is possible to have a 12" standard or a 12" deep oven. For scouting, especially for a normal patrol size of 6-8 boys, a 10" or 12" standard oven will provide the volume needed for cooking. While several manufacturers produce ovens, I recommend that you buy ovens made by Lodge Manufacturing, a company producing ovens since 1896. Dutch ovens can be purchased at grocery stores, hardware stores, or from outdoor suppliers like Academy, REI, or Jumbo Sports. If you buy a Lodge oven, you can generally be sure of the quality of the oven. Still, make sure the lid fits level and a bit snug. The sides and bottom of the pot should be of a consistent thickness, as should the lid.

Seasoning Cast Iron Dutch Ovens. Since untreated cast iron will rust and rust quickly, you must "season" the oven and lid. To do so, scrub the new pot and lid with mild soap and water before seasoning. Scrub with a stiff brush or plastic scrubbie to remove shipping residue. Then coat the oven with Crisco shortening (thin layer) on all inner and outer surfaces. Remember to do the same with the lid! Place the pieces (pot upside down) separately in a conventional oven or gas barbeque grill heated to 350°. Bake in oven or grill for 30-45 minutes. Remove from oven and coat with another thin layer of Crisco and heat for another 30-45 minutes. Be careful with the hot lid and pot! You can repeat this procedure a few more times if desired. Once you've baked for a few times, let the pieces cool inside the oven or grill until cool. If the surface feels sticky, bake again at 350°-400° to allow the excess oil to be absorbed. The Dutch oven and lid, after seasoning, should turn much darker.

Cooking with Dutch Ovens. Charcoal is the fuel of choice for cooking with Dutch ovens. I like the Kingsford brand charcoal because it is consistent from bag to bag. To ignite the charcoal, use a chimney and newspaper as opposed to lighter fluid. The fluid can be dangerous and also can impart a flavor to your food. Charcoal briquettes will typically be placed on the top of the oven and underneath the oven. A rule of thumb for heat is to use the 3 up/3 down method. For a 12" oven, add 3 briquettes to the diameter of the oven ( $12 + 3 = 15$ ) for the top or lid of the oven and subtract 3 ( $12 - 3 = 9$ ) to be placed under the bottom of the oven. This same formula can be used with any size oven and will generally result in a temperature inside the oven of  $325^{\circ}$ . Two additional briquettes can add  $25^{\circ}$  of additional heat if desired and thus you would place one more on top and one more underneath to achieve a cooking temperature of  $345-350^{\circ}$ . Distribute the coals underneath and on top in a broad pattern so as to distribute the heat evenly.

Cleaning a Dutch Oven. To clean an oven, wipe out the excess food when finished. Use a wood scraper or a non-metallic object to help you get the gunk out of the oven. Fill the oven about  $1/3$  of the way with water and then put the lid back on and heat the oven so that the water steams away the remaining residue. You may have to use a scrubbie and tongs or rubber gloves to rub while this water is steaming hot. Avoid using soap and water, so as to not damage the seasoning on the oven. When the oven is clean, dry and still hot, wipe a thin layer of cooking oil on the pot and lid to prepare the oven for the next use.

In addition to the oven, a few other items are needed for Dutch oven cooking: a lid lifter, a lid holder, leather or cooking gloves, metal tongs, and a small shovel. The lid lifter helps you move the entire oven or take the lid off to check your progress when food is being prepared. Setting the lid down in the dirt when checking your food will result in dirt being added to your recipe so use a lid holder. Gloves will help keep you from getting burned, but make sure they fit fairly loosely so you can flip them off easily. The tongs will help you move the briquettes around on top and under the oven. The shovel is handy for moving the briquettes after you have removed them from the chimney.

The remainder of this section will include recipes divided into the following categories: meats and main dishes, vegetables, soups, breads, and desserts. Try some different recipes from each category and have fun! Remember that your effort and hard work will be rewarded with a great meal that everyone can enjoy!
